MEMBRANE 10.

Aug. 8. Henley. Whereas the king by divers letters patent lately granted to Robert de Kildesby the prebend of Southcave, in the church of St. Peter, York as void by the death of cardinal Neapoleon and in his gift by reason of voidance of the archbishopric of York, and afterwards learning that the cardinal was alive at the time of the grant but had since died revoked the first grant and on 8 April, in his sixteenth year, collated the prebend then actually void and in his gift by reason of the archbishopric being then also in his hands to Master Paul de Monte Florum, the said Robert without his knowledge and against his will surreptitiously caused the letters patent of his collation to the prebend to be renewed under a new date after the cardinal's death, subsequent to the date of the said revocation and collation of the prebend to Master Paul, of which the said Robert was not ignorant, on hearing of which the king was greatly disturbed insisting on the removal of Robert from the prebend as the chancellor could not renew letters patent without his order. But the said Robert is now dead and the king considering that the collation to Master Paul never took effect and as the prebend is still in his gift has collated the same to Henry de Ingelby, king's clerk, and on his prosecuting before the justices of the Bench for a declaration of the king's right herein, there were produced there, as is said, letters patent under the king's seal, dated 30 May, in the twenty-second year, reciting among other things that the king had collated the prebend, void by the death of the cardinal in the time when the archbishopric was void, to the said Robert, and that he by virtue of such collation had been canonically admitted to and was in possession of the prebend and so the king ratified his estate therein, by pretext whereof the justices deferred rendering judgement for the king; in the interests of truth the king wills that it be publicly known that the letters of renewal as well as the letters of confirmation were surreptitiously obtained because it was never his intention to recite that the said Robert was canonically admitted to the prebend by virtue of the king's collation or to approve his title, although perhaps, at the request of some, he consented to tolerate his holding the prebend in his time; and so the king declares those letters of renewal and ratification were made against his will and are entirely without force and useless. By K. & C.

Feb. 8. Westminster Exemplification, at the request of the men and tenants of the hundred of Rocheford, co. Essex, of the tenour of records and processes of claims of liberties which the tenants of the hundred claimed in divers eyres of justices in the county, in the time of Henry III, as follows: --

(1) Pleas of juries and assizes at Chelmerford, on the morrow of Michaelmas, 56 Henry III, before Roger de Seyton and his fellows, justices in eyre. Rocheford. The bailiffs of John de Burgo of the liberty of Rocheford came before the justices and said that they have used such liberty, to wit that the bailiffs of the liberty ought to come before the justices of their eyre and ask for their liberty of the hundred of Rocheford, and the justices were wont to send one of the justices to hold the pleas of all writs and all pleas of tenements within the liberty of the hundred and all pleas of the crown, on condition however that the bailiff of Rocheford should come before the justice and elect on oath two knights of the hundred, who should elect twelve out of the hundred on the coming of the justice there, and receive from them the heads from which they should draw out their verdict and answer of each before the justices sent to hold the pleas within the hundred, and that this liberty all who have held the hundred have used from time whereof there is not memory. And this is found by the rolls of the last eyre in the county. And now comes John de Moddyngham, bailiff of the hundred, who swore before the justice here and elected Roger de Brunford and Roger de Pakelesham, who swore before the justice here and elected Gilbert le Clerk of Reyleye, William Samuel, Simon de Hethyngham, William le Blound, William de Lamburne, Hubert de Botyngham, Henry Tropinel, Geoffrey de Wenham, Thomas de Stocham and Philip le Brun, and day is appointed for them to hold the pleas of the hundred at the will of the justices &c.

(2) Pleas of juries and assizes before G. de Preston and his fellows, justices in eyre, at Chelmerford, co. Essex, on the morrow of St. Luke the Evangelist, in the beginning of the 39th year. Rocheford. The bailiffs of Margery, countess of Kent, say (as in No. 1). And this is found by the rolls of Henry de Bathonia and his fellows, justices last in eyre in the county &c.

(3) Pleas of juries and assizes at Chelmerford before H. de Bathonia and his fellows, justices last in eyre in the county of Essex, 32 Henry III. Rocheford. The whole county [court] of Essex remembers that Margery, countess of Kent, used such liberty that her bailiffs of Rocheford &c. (as above).

Exemplification also of the tenours of the records and processes of pleas of the crown as well as of juries and assizes before justices in eyre in the same county, as follows:—

(1) Pleas of juries and assizes of the liberties of the hundred of Rocheford, co. Essex, of the eyre of Nicholas de Turre and his fellows, justices in eyre, on the octave of Trinity, 46 Henry III. The assize came to find whether William le Waleys, parson of the church of Wakering, unjustly &c. raised a dyke in Great Wakering to the nuisance of the free tenement of John son of Saher, William le Venur and Emma, his wife. The latter complain that where they used to have a way to go with carts and wagons and to drive their cattle to their common of pasture, the same William has raised a dyke by such way, narrowing the way so that they cannot have their right of way. The jury say that William has raised the dyke where the complainants made view to them, but not to any nuisance of their free tenements. And it is adjudged that William go sine die and John and the others be in mercy.

(2) Pleas of the crown in the county of Essex of the eyre of G. de Preston and his fellows, at Relegh, on Monday after the octaves of St. Martin, in the beginning of 39 Henry III. These were the coroners after the last eyre in that hundred, to wit William le Brun and John de Bratton. These were the bailiffs after the last eyre, to wit Robert de Stanford and Roger de Brunford.

It is presented in that hundred as in the county [court], Walter son of William and his two sisters were burned in the house of William their father in Hockel. Maud, their mother, the first finder, comes not nor is she suspected and she was attached by Robert Pech of Hockel and Gilbert le Webbe (Textorem) of the same. Therefore no one is in mercy thereof.

Nov. 26. Westminster. The like to William de Shareshull, Roger Hillary, Thomas de Fencotes, Thomas de Haukeston, Thomas de Seton and John Moubray, on complaint by the abbot of St. Mary's, York, that whereas of late the king—at his suit complaining that whereas Edward I on complaint by the mayor and bailiffs of York before him in Parliament suggesting that Bouthom is a suburb of the city and that the then abbot and his predecessors in the suburb of Bouthom had usurped liberties belonging to them, appointed Robert de Nevill and others as justices to hear and determine the contentions between the mayor, citizens and bailiffs of the said city and the abbot shewn in Parliament on both sides, and before these justices by a lawful inquisition whereon both parties put themselves it was found that the town of Bouthom was the abbot's borough and that, if the mayor or bailiffs of the city at any time entered therein to do anything, this was by escheat or in time of war and not of right, that the town was a suburb of the city and that the men dwelling thereof ought not and used not to be tallaged except by reason of merchandise exercised within the city, that the abbot and all his men and tenants were quit of toll by royal charters, and if the mayor or bailiffs took any toll of them this was by escheat or in time of war and not of right, and that the then abbot of St. Mary's had the standard gallon and ell by livery of the marshals of Edward I and likewise had the standard by livery of the marshals of the father of the said king, by charters of liberties granted to the church of St. Mary and confirmed by kings, from king to king, to that time, and if the mayor or bailiffs of the city proved the measures in Bouthom subsequently this was by force and in time of war and not of right, and it was adjudged that the then abbot be acquitted of the usurpation upon the rights of the king laid to his charge, and the mayor and citizens be in mercy for their false claim, and Bouthom should remain from henceforth to the abbot and his successors and their church of St. Mary as the borough of the same, and the men dwelling in the borough should not be tallaged with the citizens of the city except by reason any merchandise exercised within the city and the abbot and his men and tenants should be quit of toll for ever, as by the record and process thereof had before the said justices and exemplified under the great seal more fully appears —by divers writs several times commanded John de Langeton, now mayor of the city, and William de Swanland, John Freboys and Henry Gudbarn, bailiffs of the same, Henry de Scorby, late mayor, and Thomas de Siggeston, Nicholas de Santon of York, John Clerevaux of York, Henry le Scrope of York, Hugh de Miton of York and Richard de Amcotes of York, late bailiffs of that city, to permit the abbot to hold the borough in peace and his men and tenants to use their liberties according to the tenour of the charters and judgement, and not to intermeddle themselves in the borough, the mayor and bailiffs as well as the said Henry de Scorby, Thomas, Nicholas, John Clerevaux, Henry le Scrope, Hugh and Richard, in contempt of his mandates, assembling a great company of evildoers and disturbers of the peace, have nevertheless entered the borough, several times, made distraints and attachments on the abbot and his men and tenants in the borough and on others coming there for contracts, covenants and trespasses emergent in the borough, and caused the same men and tenants to be tallaged for their goods in the borough with the citizens of the city and toll to be taken there, also the measures within the borough to be proved and money extorted from the men and tenants, wherefore the men and tenants have left the borough, and the abbot has lost his profit of the borough. For 2 marks paid in the hanaper.
